HISTORICAL DATA:

Hanover Street is a continuation of the Annapolis Road into the center of Baltimore and is consequently a busy thoroughfare. The northern end of the street ~~near~~ the center of the city bears evidence of old residences of fairly well-to-do people, but the eight hundred block was probably always about as known today, occupied by small business in first floor shops with the residence of the shop keeper in the same building. Number 832 is now occupied by a cleaning and scouring establishment. Next door on the corner of Henrietta Street and opposite are some junk shops.
